

ALEXANDRIA.

FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 10.

A COUNTRY merchant, from the lower Potomac section of the State, in a communication to the GAZETTE, says he now buys all his groceries in this city, as they cost him less delivered than when bought in any other market, but that he has to go to Baltimore for some of his other goods, as there are no jobbing and wholesale houses in Alexandria where merchants can obtain their supplies of such goods. Such houses, he says, he is confident would soon do as large a business as he knows the wholesale grocery merchants here are now doing. Before the war Alexandria had just such jobbing and wholesale houses, the lack of which the merchant referred to complains of, and what's more, they all did a profitable business. May be it would be so again if the experiment were tried.

MR. JOHN NEWMAN EDWARDS, whose recent death at his home in Kansas City is so much deplored by the people of that city, of whose paper, the Times, he was the editor, was a native of Warren county in this State. He was a gallant Confederate soldier during the war—was conceded to be the Chevalier Bayard of the western army—and at the close of that struggle, preferring expatriation to surrender, joined Maximilian's forces in Mexico. His feeling for his glorious but short lived nation was akin to that of a devoted son for his buried mother, and it was only a few years ago that he fought a duel with an Illinois man who had uttered disparaging remarks concerning ex-President Davis. Warren county may well be proud of such a son.

THE RECENT reduction in the price of their product made by the iron manufacturers of Pennsylvania, judging from accounts received from the sites of various iron industries in the South, gives the southern iron manufacturers no trouble or even anxiety. The lower price of northern made iron, the more southern iron will be sold, for it can be sold cheaper, and the sooner will the South have all the iron trade; for the northern manufacturers are so handicapped by the natural difficulties against which they have to contend, that the cheaper they sell their product the sooner will they be compelled to closed business. Having all the materials for the manufacture of iron in juxtaposition, southern iron makers can defy the competition of the world.

SOME PEOPLE, calling themselves "old line whigs," called upon President Harrison yesterday. They were marshaled by ex-Senator Pomeroy, Mr. A. M. Clapp and General Schenck. The idea that Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, Gen. Harrison, and the other old whigs of 1840, would have gone any where, on any occasion, under such marshaling as that of those referred to, shows that the man who entertains it is, as a witness in the police court of this city once said, "ignorant of the past, and therefore of the future, and must remain an ass forever."

THE FLAX, hemp, and jute manufacturers of this country have recently held a convention, at which the speaker most loudly applauded was the one who said: "We really turned the tide in the last national election, and we ought to get something." The "something" referred to is an increased duty on all the articles mentioned, which are necessities, and the few manufacturers of which, in order to increase their own profits, want to increase the taxes of all the other people in the country.

THE STATE democratic convention of Kentucky met yesterday and declared emphatically and unequivocally for tariff reform and for the stand the national democratic party has taken in support of the reduction of the tariff on the necessities of life and on raw materials. The members of the convention being democrats, and not republicans, could have done nothing else without stultifying themselves.

AND NOW a South Carolina soldier comes out boldly and says he saw General Roger A. Pryor, who at the time was a private, desert to the enemy. Whether General Pryor deserted or not, the fact that he was a great Butler man in 1864 induces some people to think he was not too good to do so.

From Washington.

(Special Correspondence of the ALEX. GAZETTE)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10, 1889.

Attorney General Miller being asked to-day if the appointment of Mr. R. R. Farr to be U. S. marshal for the eastern district of Virginia could rightly be considered a Mahone appointment, replied that he did not know. Continuing, he said, Mr. Farr's application had the endorsement of many Virginia republicans, among them Gen. Mahone; that the appointment was certainly not made solely upon the General's recommendation, but whether it could be considered a Mahone appointment he did not know and, therefore, could not say. Mr. Farr has been treasurer of Fairfax county, has represented that county in the legislature, and was superintendent of public instruction in Virginia during the Mahone regime, and is known as a Mahone partisan.

Ex-Auditor Brown Allen, of Virginia, who has been here so long, waiting for an office, has like most of the other republican office seekers who have been here from his State, become sick at heart with hope deferred, and gone home, anything else than a happy man. The President is by no means as popular with the Virginia republicans, black and white alike, as he was soon after his election.

Among the strangers in the city to-day is ex-Senate Senator Meredith, of Prince William county, Va. He says he thinks the scramble for the little postoffices in his county will tend to strengthen the democratic party in that county, for the reason that though there are only a few republicans capable of conducting a postoffice properly in any of the postoffice neighborhoods of the county, nearly every such republican is an applicant for the office in his neighborhood, and that so provoked are they with each other and with those who assume to direct the distribution of the offices, that they will hardly become reconciled by next fall's election. Regarding that election, he says the democrats of his county have no personal preference for any of the gentlemen spoken of as possible candidates for the gubernatorial nomination, and will be satisfied with any one whom the convention may think possesses all the qualifications for success.

Col. Brady, of Petersburg, Va., one of the anti-Mahone leaders in his State, says that while Gen. Mahone's endorsement on an application for office does not, and properly, prevent the application from being successful, it certainly does not promote the success of the applicant to any considerable degree.

Col. Robt. Berkeley, of Farmville, Virginia, says he does not know whether the appointment of Mr. Farr will put Gen. Mahone in a better humor than he was in yesterday or not, but that certainly when he called on him then, to talk about the condition of the republican party in his Prince Edward county, the General was in anything else than a good humor, and for the first time in his life treated him, Berkeley, brusquely. He says the General told him he did not want to be bothered about politics, that people need not be coming to him with their applications for office as he would not sign them; he wished politics were in h—, and if those in Virginia went on much longer in the same way they were then going on, the State would go democratic next fall, and that he wouldn't care a d—d if she did, or words to that effect.

It is reported here that the President has been informed that at the last election Gen. Longstreet did not vote for him, and did vote for the democratic candidate for Congress in his district.

The testimony in the contested Congressional election case of Langston vs. Venable, from the Petersburg district in Virginia, will be opened by Col. Clark, clerk of the House, to-morrow, and be sent to the public printer.

The suit in the long standing Otterback estate case has been set for the 21st inst., before Judge Cox of this city. None of the courts of this city will be in session to-morrow as the judges, members of the bar and the court officers will have their annual shad-bake at Marshall Hall on that day.

Mr. VanAken of Petersburg, Virginia, an ardent Mahone man, and Major S. P. Bayly, of Fauquier county, in the same State, an earnest anti-Mahone man, had a long talk at the National Hotel here to-day, at the conclusion of which the latter told a friend he had been much amused at the former's attempt to convert him to Mahonism. The Major says General Mahone is the sole cause of all the trouble in the republican party in his State, and that he, Bayly, is convinced that the President is not going to put the federal patronage of Virginia in the hands of such a man.

At 6 o'clock yesterday evening a material train on the Atlantic and Danville Railroad jumped the track in the Danville city limits and a flat loaded with steel rails turned over. The South Carolina Diocesan Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Aiken yesterday adopted an amendment to the constitution, which, it is believed, will temporarily settle the dispute as to the negro in the church. The only limitation as to colored clergymen is that hereafter they must be rectors of churches declared to be in union with the convention by a concurrent vote of both orders. Mr. J. J. Pringle Smith, of Charleston, withdrew from the convention. His action was the result of the fight on the color question. About a half dozen others marched out of the convention declaring they would not sit in it as long as a negro occupied a seat. There are four negro churches in the diocese, neither of which has elected lay delegates to the convention for the past five or six years. Rev. Pollard is the only colored clergyman whose name appears on the Bishop's roll.

DR. MCGUIRE'S CALL TO PHILADELPHIA. A dispatch from Richmond says: "Considerable interest has been excited here by the announcement that the trustees of the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, propose to call Dr. Hunter McGuire, of this city, to the professorship of surgery. Dr. McGuire graduated at this institution and was demonstrator of anatomy there when the war broke out. The institution was then liberally patronized by the South, and when the news of Sumter reached them Dr. McGuire made an impassioned appeal to all Southerners to leave, and together with two hundred others, he bolted and came South. Dr. McGuire was Stonewall Jackson's chief surgeon, and amputated Jackson's arm when the Confederate general was so badly wounded. After the war Dr. McGuire established himself in Richmond and built up a large practice, in recent years establishing a private hospital, which is one of the largest institutions of the kind in the South. He is well off. He did not apply for the position in connection with which his name is now used, and, when asked if he would accept, declined to say anything."

ELOPED.—Helen Morgan Trenholm, 18 years of age, a niece of ex-Comptroller Trenholm, left her home in Georgetown yesterday morning, met by appointment Mr. William W. Breneman, a young man twenty-two years of age, employed in a local real estate office, and the two were united in wedlock. They then went to Philadelphia, where they are now staying at the Lafayette Hotel. Messages informing the parents of their marriage were sent home. Young Breneman is a nephew of Mr. A. A. Wilson, the United States marshal for the District of Columbia. The reason for the runaway wedding was the opposition of Mr. Breneman's mother to his marrying.

THE SIGHTLIEST PLACE IN THE WORLD.—Professor Whitney says that from the summit of Mount Hamilton, in California, more of the earth's surface can be seen than from any other spot on the globe, though it is only about 4,500 feet high. The view extends around it in every direction, and the snow-capped range of the lofty Sierras can be plainly seen 200 miles away against the northern sky. To the south, nearly as far away, the San Bernardino range limits the view, and between the two lies room for all the Eastern States, with their rivers, lakes, mountains and sea coast.—Worcester Spy.

ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCHES.

Execution of Bald Knobbers.

ST. LOUIS, May 10.—The three bald knobbers, Dave Walker, better known in Christian county, as "Ball Creek Dave," chief of the bald knobbers, his son, William Walker, and John Matthews, were hanged for the murder of Charles Green and William Eleus, on March 11, 1887. Neither of the trio had yet reached his fiftieth year, and William Walker was barely 19 years of age. About April 12 the attorneys for Bill Walker and John Matthews made a strong appeal for commutation of the sentences of their clients, and when that was denied, asked for a respite to May 10, the date of Dave Walker's execution, which was granted. For the past two weeks powerful pleas have been made to Governor Francis for commutation of the sentences of the three men, and on Wednesday last after reviewing the case at length, the Governor declined to interfere further, and the condemned men were notified that they must die. Dave Walker and his son Bill received the news calmly, and with the nerve that has always sustained them, but Matthews broke down completely and wept like a child. The bald knobbers first came into prominence when the notorious Frank and Tabal Taylor entered the home of a Mr. Dickinson, in Forsythe, Mo., some time ago and murdered an entire family. The outlaws were captured by the new law and order league and promptly lynched. There were numerous visits bald knobbers to petty offenders, but nothing occurred to attract special attention until the Green-Edens affair, which terminated in the downfall of bald knobberism. The Green-Edens killing occurred on the night of March 11, 1887. At a point 8 miles east of Ozark and near the Edens dwelling one John Evans was whipped by the bald knobbers for misbehaving in church.

The drop fell at 9:53 a. m. The ropes broke and the three men fell to the ground struggling. The men were carried to the scaffold again. Bill Walker struggled, groaning and almost insensible. They were then strung up again and died within 15 minutes. The execution was a horribly managed affair.

In railroad securities there is very little doing, and the market may be quoted flat.
